The Truth About

An official of the Underwood Type-writer company had not been approached relative to a combination to lower the soaring coat of living. But at the present time insurance, the American Munition Company, the purpose of which was to execute war purpose to the individual. Without fire insurance all lines handling merderwood Company has not and is not stable foundation. The multitudinous force is wholly engaged in the manufacture of typewriters.

The Truth About

An official of the Underwood Type-wants from the earth. And the vast army of non-productive agents, solicitors and employees will find jobs at useful productive labor, thus tending to lower the soaring coat of living. But at the present time insurance, the purpose of which was to execute war purpose to the individual. Without fire insurance all lines handling merderwood Company has not and is not stable foundation. The multitudinous conveniences of credit would have to be done on the archaic cash basis. Consequently the insurance man, though theoretically a parasite he will be excepted at the present time insurance and the vast army of non-productive agents. And the vast army of non-productive agents.

Analysis applied to the fire in-surance agent's field of operation is productive of good results. His pros-pects are to be found under five head-ings, each one of which should be sys-tematically covered. They run as follows:

Personal friends.
Business acquaintances.
Real estate transfers.

2. Real estate transfers.
4. Household items.
5. Property owners in general.
Among the personal friends he should find business among: (a) Those who possess property, (b) those who are planning to become householders, (c) those who own furniture, either insured or uninsured.
Among his business acquaintances he should obtain business from: (a) Men from whom; he purchase commodities—his grocer, butcher, tailor, isundry, &c., (b) his landlord, and (c) his banker. The latter, who is constantly making loans on improved property which must be insured to protect the loan, should prove to be a particularly fruitful source of business.

a particularly fruitful source of business.

Real estate transfers, access to the records of which is readily obtainable, present a splendid field for the insurance man's activities. He should unearth business in cases where: (a) Property changes hands, (b) mortgages are placed, (c) new rentals are involved, (d) new businesses are launched, (e) new buildings are constructed, (f) buildings or their constructed, (f) buildings or their constructed, (f) buildings or their constructed, the business are damaged by fire.

Household items which can be obtained either through clipping bureaus or a close study of the local papers have brought much business to the fire insurance man. (A) The formation of new households through marriage, (b) the arrival of new tenants and (c) fires in private houses marriage, (b) the arrival of new tenants and (c) fires in private houses all mean possible business for the live agent.

Property owners in general can be approached from a score of angles.
They can be reached through: (a) Straightforward solicitation, (b) real estate men, (c) teamsters and moving concerns, (d) newspaper material, (e) evidence of property transfers, (f)
legal reports and (g) county records.

concerns, (d) newspaper material, (e) evidence of property transfers, (f) legal reports and (g) county records.

Although not generally considered a profession, a fire insurance agent's business can be developed to so high a plane that it is a profession to all intents and purposes. In other words, the insurance man who is thoroughly versed in his business can render a high grade of expert advice to his clients. A skifful representation of his customer's case may result in lower rates from the underwriting board. Suggestions regarding the installation of fire protection devices or a rearrangement of his property may effect the same result.

Here is an actual instance of the value of an insurance man's advice. A certain small manufacturer in a large city decided to construct a new plant. As he knew exactly what he wanted, he employed no architect, but with the aid of a practical builder prepared a rough set of working drawings. Knowing pothing of the local building requirements, he secured the necessary information along these lines from the city building commission.

An insurance man happened to drive past as the foundation was being constructed. He looked up the owner for the purpose of talking insurance. During the course of the conversation the manufacturer produced the plans. The insurance man studied them interestedly.

"But look here, man," he finally ejacuiated, "as you've laid out this plant your insurance will come to $5 a hundred, or $400 a year on your $8,000 investment."

"That's a mighty high rate," countered the owner.

"Yes, but if you'll make certain changes according to modern safety practice it can be reduced to $2.50 per thousand," and the agent indicated the necessary changes involving a rearrangement of certain departments, the abolition of certain partitions, &c.

The building was constructed according to the insurance man's suggestions; the rate was set at but half the original figure and the owner aved $200 a year by availing himself of the agent's knowledge.

The phy-sician was arrested by Detectives Riley and Finan, of the Fourth Branch Bureau, after he had, the de-tectives say, sold heroin to a woman

The detectives some time before had arrested Edward Day, of No. 308 West One Hundred and Twenty-third Street, who is said to have admitted Street, who is said to have admitted that goods in a suitcase he had were stolen. At the Fourth Branch Bureau Day begged for heroin and was permitted to send for his wife, a good looking girl of eighteen years. Mrs. Day went out to buy the drug and the detectives followed her. Dr. Hoyt's arrest was the result. The doctor said after his arrest, according to the detectives, that Day was his patient and "needed" the drug.

Semberger Sends It to Engan, Who Reports It's Honey,

A mysterious package received by special delivery at the office of Dr. J. B. Neuberger, No. 191 Grand Street, was examined this morning by Inspector o Combustibles Owen Eagan. Dr. Neuberger feared that the package might ontain an infernal machine.
"I am pleased to report," the Inspector told the doctor to-day, "that the 'bomb' is a bottle of fine honey some friend has

Dr. Neuburger then recalled that patient had taken the cardboard con-tainer of the honey bottle from the doctor's own office several days ago, announcing at the time that he "wanted to mail a package to some one."
